

Sara Barba is Principal at Integer, LLC, where she represents clients in the government relations practice. Sara is a philanthropy and tax policy expert with a proven track record of developing and executing strategic advocacy efforts to drive meaningful change in the tax code. On behalf of the nonprofit sector, she has helped advance policies like the temporary universal charitable deduction, the simplification of the private foundation excise tax, and repeal of the burdensome church parking tax (nonprofit UBIT on fringe benefits). She holds a master's degree in philanthropic studies from the Indiana University Lilly Family School of Philanthropy, and her writing on the sector has been published in Bloomberg Tax, Trusts & Estates, and Wealth Management.